Karrlin Field, known to all as Karrli, was an aspiring and talented writer of stories, poetry, and novels as well as a designer of imaginative and dramatic computer games. To learn more about Karrli, her works and her life, please visit www.karrli.com.

Karrli was only 17 when she died of cystic fibrosis in 2004 but she left behind an impressive amount of creative work. Karrli's award honors her life, her creative works and her legacy by encouraging young women to follow their creative dreams, as Karrli would have wanted to. Karrli had always dreamed of attending the University of Advancing Technology in Tempe, Arizona. Her Memorial Scholarship Award provides financial support to female students who attend UAT, and who are pursuing a college education in computer game development and design.

ESSAY QUESTION:

Karrli's legacy encourages young women to follow their creative dreams. What are your creative and professional dreams and aspirations, and how do you plan to inspire other female gamers to reach for theirs? How would this award help you to continue your education and prepare for a career as a gamer?
